REMINISCENCE

Of the Battle of Alleghany, December 13, 1861.

My dear friends, I have been thinking of the battle of Alleghany, December 13, 1861, and how it has been in my mind ever since.

Quite recently while glancing over my diary for 1861, I came upon this entry:

Friday, December 13, 1861.—This is the date of the battle of Alleghany. The victory was a great one, and it was a great day for us.

My diary reads as follows: "This morning at Mr. Adam Stephens' on the head of Jackson's River, Highland County, the sky was exceedingly clear and serene."

Two persons came in early and stated that they had heard cannonading and volleys of musketry in the direction of Camp Alleghany.

I listened but could hear nothing to satisfy me. At 11 a.m. I went in company with a young lady (now Mrs. Col. Arnett, of Wheeling) to spend the morning in a social visit at the home of a young friend (now Mrs. Kate Burns of Pennsylvania) just recovering from a long attack of fever.

On the way we heard two distinct reports of cannonading. Leaving my young friend at the home we were to visit I hastened on to hear if possible what it meant.

Upon reaching Hightown I heard that the Commissary, J. Smith, member of the House of Delegates, from Harrison County, has just passed with his books under his arm.

His statement was that the Confederates were about possession of the stores and ammunition by the river, and driven the Confederates into the trenches where they were surrounded, having no ration and with very little ammunition.

This account which I heard from a little spirit I had and I at once determined to go on. Col. Scott's Regiment, the 44th Virginia Volunteer, came on to Hightown and was just moving out and I joined them.

Being acquainted with the Adjutant, young Steptoe, of Richmond, I offered my services to him in any capacity. He introduced me to Colonel Buckner, of Buckleingham County, and he had me act as courier, and I carried dispatches from the column to the advance guard and back again a number of times during our forced march from Hightown to Alleghany.

As we advanced numbers of fugitives from the scene of action were seen. Some of these were wounded and others had their hats and clothes pierced with balls.

They represented the Confederates, and some of them were officers and some of the Federals and their retreat to the east was slow.

The nearer we came the more fugitives we saw. Some were on foot and some on horseback. They were all looking back over their shoulders at us.

No communication had been received from Col. Edward Johnson, which made the matter appear very serious. The officer in command observed that "it was a very bad case."

He said that the situation was very serious and that we must be careful. He said that the situation was very serious and that we must be careful.

The nearer they approached the more fugitives we saw. They were all looking back over their shoulders at us.

They were all looking back over their shoulders at us. They were all looking back over their shoulders at us.

ORDER IN FIRST DEGREE

is the Verdict of the Jury in the Killian Murder Trial after being out but a few minutes.

to Murderer of Mrs. Julia Ann Simmons to be sentenced to life imprisonment.

The trial of Jerome Killian has been in progress for two days. In September 1899 he went with Charles Apperson to call on some girls on Swago. Learning that they were at Mrs. Julia Ann Simmons on the mountain the boys received ed there.

Killian had been drinking and when he arrived there he became disorderly. After a time Mrs. Simmons took an old army sabre and went towards him to drive him away. He shot and killed her and escaped. He was arrested in Harrison County last May. The defense is represented by H. S. Rick and S. R. Seig, and the State by T. S. McNeil and John W. Stephenson. The case was given to the jury Thursday evening. They returned a verdict of murder in the first degree to be punished by imprisonment.

The jury consisted of the following men:

M. L. Beard, D. C. Hill, Ellis McCarty, Pat Hamilton, J. R. Gum John Strader, James Collins, C. C. Wadsworth, Wm. Moore, C. M. Keller, H. M. Harper, Adam C. Moore.

April Court convened Tuesday, but as usual very little business was transacted the first day. The jury for the Killian murder case was impaneled and the second day was taken up in hearing the evidence. Thursday was mostly spent in pleading the case, which was given to the jury in the evening. The jury was out but a short time, and returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. The prisoner was to be sentenced Friday morning.

Quite a number of lawyers from a distance were present. The inclement weather kept many of the people who had no special business at court at home and consequently the crowd was comparatively unswayed and it is reported that small, and it was rather a poor court for business.

The Eastern storm broke all records this year.

LUMBERMAN DROWNED

Boat Sinking Near his Death in Williams River.

Supposed to be from Marlinton County. Was Drowned at Marlinton.

Jacob W. Shockey, with seven other men were engaged in driving logs on Williams River for the Middle Fork Driving Company last Saturday. The steam is very rough where they were working, having a great fall. A splash was on and the logs had jammed just below Irvine's landing.

A shot of dynamite had been exploded under the jam, and the crew rushed in to loosen up the logs. After a few logs had been dislodged a portion of the jam moved out, throwing Shockey and Wm. Allen into the water. Cole was near the wing of the jam and scrambled out, but Shockey was caught by the current and carried down stream. He was running high over the boulders, but Shockey was swimming like a duck, with his head out of the water.

He went out of sight around a bend, and was found drowned a mile or so down the river. It is supposed that he was dashed to death against some of the boulders of that rapid stream.

He left Marlinton March 13 to work in that camp. He has worked on Cheat. The address found on his pocket knife was Clements, Barbour County. He was unmarried and about 40 years old.

His body was brought Marlinton and buried Monday.

We have heard the name of W. R. Sutton mentioned as a candidate for County Commissioner. We want a man who will look after the interests of the people of Pocahontas County. One who will not be influenced by a fine speech against the rights of the people. One who can calculate the cost of any undertaking, be it great or small. In Mr. Sutton we find a man well calculated to fill this important position. Let us hear from him.

Stock has wintered up well in this part and feed is still plenty.

As the bridge question seems to be agitating the people, it should be put to rest. We say build a road so you can get to the river. You need a compass if you travel the road in this part.

ANOTHER FIRE

Home Burned to the Ground in the Flatwoods.

George Allen Lost his Home and Nearly all his Household Goods. R. A. Walton also a Heavy Loser.

George Allen had the misfortune to have his house burned Thursday afternoon. It caught from the kitchen stove pipe, which went through the ceiling and out the roof. The family was at dinner, and hearing something drop investigated, and discovered the flames coming out the gable ends.

An effort was made to put the fire out, but it had too much headway. Mr. Allen was the only man on the place and by the time he had carried Duffield, a bolt-ridden invalid to a safe distance, the house was blazing so fiercely that very little of the plunder could be saved. The smoke house standing near was also burned with all its contents. The barn and outhouses were saved with difficulty. Loss estimated between $1500 and $2000, no insurance.

The house was comparatively new and was well built. Mr. Allen has in it over a 1/2 house on his place, which he will occupy until the fall when he intends to rebuild.

R. A. Walton, who has been boarding at the Allen's, was also a heavy loser. His fire saving nothing except the clothes he wore. He had $75 worth of books, and some valuable papers, including a life insurance policy, burned his loss approximately $200.

BALTIMORE CONFERENCE

Norman R. Price Reads an Account of the Proceedings of this Ecclesiastical Body.

Mrs. Lawson and McNeil Return to their Former Positions. Rev. Hunt goes to Hancock.

Baltimore Conference has been in session at Trinity Church for more than a week. Tuesday at 12 o'clock an immense crowd assembled to stand and listen with breathless interest to the announcement of appointments for the ensuing year. The ministers of the Conference, many of their families present, are much interested in a disposal of themselves that often means a migration to a new home and field. We heard a little girl remark when her father's name was called: "We go to Charleston; just to think!"

Among those we noted were well known in Pocahontas: Rev. and Mrs. Sarver, Rev. Parrott, Rev. Anderson, E. H. Moore and Rev. Whitcomb of Academy who goes to Freedom, Baltimore District; also Rev. Echols who is looking well and is full of zeal for the service. Partial List: Lewisburg District: Levels—Charles Lynch, Marlinton—H. Lawson, Greenbank—J. W. McNeil and one to be supplied.

Roncovert—Wm. Stevens. Rev. Mr. Hunt goes to St. James Church in Roanoke.

Mr. Lawson was enabled to make a favorable report, financial and otherwise, in advance of the one last year, from Marlinton and Huntersville.

Bishop Galloway preached Sunday, and many were turned away because there was no room in the house. In his sermon this eminent preacher compared the condition in warning the modern young preacher against his religious service—to that of a dog with a tin can tied to his tail: "If he don't go faster he will scare himself to death; and if he goes faster he will shake himself to pieces!"

Hello Mr. Editor—We are having quite a lot of snow at present. We all might call it an Easter storm.

Fuel is getting scarce in this community.

Mr. and Mrs. Mack Ervine paid a visit to Mrs. Ervine home on Easter Sunday.

Harry Gwin of Frost was down last week of J. H. Buzzards and laid in a big supply of grain and feed.

Craig had a good excuse to go to Frost last Thursday. He got a pig plow which he bought at the sale, and he expects to turn the soil this spring. Craig is a hater of plowing and working the horses has been the order the past week.

Larry Harold was up Sunday to visit his father, who is sick.

Adrian, Fred was home from South Bottom last week and so on a few days.

WHAT IS Cash Bargain House ? ?

It is the offering of a small business started at Edray in a house 14200. Now it is considered the largest building in the county, full of bargains for cash buyers.

Here are a few words from a customer who bought the Watson town shoe and a prominent citizen of this community.

Mr. Peter McCarty says that he bought a pair of Watson town shoes a year and a few days ago for $3.50. He wore them ever since and is still wearing them. The shoes don't leak a drop, but if you want the better shoe I will furnish you the genuine with A. A. Cutter's name on them and stamped No. 1. It is the policy of this store to have the real thing.

There was a lively conversation between two ladies. One said she didn't think the Venetian cloth which Golden offers for 38 cents could be good, and that it was impossible to sell a first class article for the price. Mrs. R. who overheard the conversation told them that she was wearing a skirt from the same goods and it looked like new. She had to pay 40 cents as it had been reduced from 50 cents. You will appreciate the bargains I offer in women goods. They are 25 per cent less than former prices as I am in need of money to go to New York right soon.

WOODS AND WATER

DEPARTMENT.

If you have caught a fish or killed a bird in the last hundred years please send the particulars to this department.

TWO BIG TROUT.

One of the primitive methods of taking fish from the water is by means of a dill, which is a Southern provincialism for snaring fish with a noose.

It is supposed that this is the most ancient method of catching fish. After men had developed sufficiently to grasp the idea that it was easier to get an apple from the tree by the use of a stick or stone than to climb the tree, the rest of mechanical ideas follow in due time.

He soon ceased to plunge into the water with bare hands, and taking a noose made from the mane of a two-toed horse, he attached it to a stick and noosed the man-eating fish around his body and yanked it from the water.

This method of catching fish is used, and is successful also on the sluggish cyprinodont or sucker, and the gentle salmonid or trout.

The sucker lies on the bottom of the stream apparently asleep. The snare is placed carefully in front of the fish and he advances toward it by degrees. The fatal noose is at length around the body of the fish and quick strong jerk tightens the noose and lands the unlucky sucker on the bank.

Not so with the trout. That fish is apt to be found in mid water and when the noose is presented in front of the fish it shows signs of the greatest excitement. Its fins fan the water incessantly, but it has not seen the fisher it seems unable to leave the vicinity of the bait. It is excited, it is held behind it, it will go into it tail first, and may be caught.

It seems under the game law it is unlawful to take fish or trout with the dill, the only prescribed way of catching these fish being by hook and line. It is equally unlawful to wait until they come on the bank to graze and knock them on the head with a club.

On one occasion we were meeting with poor success by fishing on a trout stream. We came to a pool and failed to get a rise. Up on looking over a log we saw at least a dozen fine trout in the pool. Unable to withstand the temptation we took an old leader and made a dill, and affixed it to the end of the rod. We tried a frisk and saw that what was lying was suspended in the water. This fish immediately showed signs of his excitement and slipped through the dill and was too quick to be caught. After several minutes of this kind of work we saw one of the largest trout of his kind, some 14 inches long, lying as still as a stone in the bottom of the pool. This fish was the closest one of all in the pool, and had escaped notice on account of its stillness and extraordinary size.

We immediately transferred our attention to him and slipped the dill over his head without the slightest noise. Getting a good hold we tried to jerk it from the water, but the big log over which we were fishing was in the way. Twice we got the noose on the log of the log, but the rod bent so that before the fish could be lifted clear of it the noose slipped off and the big trout went back into the water with a mighty splash. That disgusted us with dilling and we went back to fly-fishing and by working hard we caught a small brown sucker that day. A little farther down stream we came to a long pool that was entirely land-locked. There was plenty of water in it, and it was deep and level by reason of its underground connections with the main river. The pool was on a high channel, an island of several acres surrounded by water.

We got down on our hands and knees and then propped on the ground worked our way to a place where we were able to make a dill. The fish had hardly touched the bait when he was in the water. We caught the noose on a fine trout of 12 inches and that put every other trout in that pool in hiding.

As we walked by the pool a small trout about 12 inches long was seen feeding down the pool and had under a half minute water about two feet deep. Walking into the pool we caught the trout and it was a fine specimen of the species.

The trout was not large to be taken with a dill, but it was a fine specimen of the species. The trout was not large to be taken with a dill, but it was a fine specimen of the species.

had heard the hop-hop-hop of a rabbit.

I was standing at the bottom of one of our river ridges trying to make out the rabbit I had heard. Just then a cannon ball grazed my ear. It was a pheasant dropping down from the mountain top and had not missed my head two inches. I was able to describe the rush of that headlong flight. The best illustration that we can give was that it was like the passing of a cannon ball.

The bird was evidently dropping down to drink of the clear waters of Knappa Creek.

The rabbit came by a few moments later and a raking shot from the shot gun killed his carcass to the string of game.

Last Friday morning while Miss Fannie McLaughlin was in the dining room of the hotel, she heard something striking against the screen door, and fell while she did not muse on the situation like Poe as to what was this "knocking" knocking at the dining room door, she open flung the portal, and there, instead of the raven, was a dead pheasant or ruffed grouse.

This bird had evidently been flushed from one of the heights around town and had taken a flight through Marlinton, after the manner of a cannon ball, and had dashed itself against the hotel and been killed.

A WAIT FROM HAPPY HOLIDAYS.

Times admit what they used to be any way. If you get out the old army pistol, thinking you will improve your shooting qualities a bit, and go down the river where no one will be disturbed and bang away at things going down the river, here comes the town police and pulls you into court for violating some half forgotten statute passed by a provident council.

It is of course, it may be, will some time have glass fronts and bay windows strung along the whole face of nature, and a law controlling stray bullets would then come in handy. Whether he will get the glass fronts or not remains yet to be seen, but we have the law. After testing its constitutionality, we paid the costs.

In trying to get away from the world's busy strife we live away up Stony Creek to catch a few trout and a cold. Even here we find competition, for about the banks cut up by tracks, which have been both coming and going. Uncle Sam has planted trout in the stream and you are warned not to catch any of those seed fish. We reckon they were put in to raise young minks and otters on. This is like muzzling the ox that plows the corn, for heaven we told people it would be a pity to catch those fish that Uncle Sam took much trouble to put in the stream. But to the officer of the law all cattle look alike, and the one nearest the corn needs the most watching.

Then there is the game law that don't allow a man to protect himself from the inroads of varmints. If a deer or turkey tries to run over on him he must merely stand to a side and give full right of way. If they come to despoil his corn crop he must go and drive them out, for to put the dog on them would be a misdemeanor and he would be in line for some costs. Were you to go into the street and give a few yells to show your power, you can think, and there are more costs to pay. After he has spent his substance in costs there remains but one thing to do. He can fly to the mountains of Hepsimah where the ramp growth knee high; where only the hoist on mountains, and the stream arm of the law is not felt in the land.

What about saloons? Some say we should have them; others say not. The County Court decided negatively. What then are we going to do about the speak-easies, the disgraceful enemies of the county? It seems that the majority of the people are against licensed saloons, but they give no plan to abate the speak-easies. Two wild ducks fed in our back yard last week for several days.

They were what we used to call butter ducks, and they tempted us

mightily, but the ducks last week were out on April 1st and they did not appear until the 2nd. Besides we do not forget anymore that this town has an ordinance against shooting in the corporation.

This species of duck once gave us a dislike for gravelly thickened with flowers that we have never gotten over. Some of us had killed two ducks. I know I did not kill them because I have always had the privilege of seeing my fat ducks float off on the tide and to gather up the poor little torn ones that always float ashore, but that was on others occasions.

These ducks have been here to winter on the rock-ribbed shores of the Greenbrier, for they were so poor they had an odor of their own that was not of their own. But they were called butter ducks and therefore they must be cooked.

The women folk made them as possible as possible as possible.

They were well

browned and looked all right, but even the grays were tough, and its fat was not of the best.

Since then we don't choose thickened gravies, and always pass on

Times. GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT

Work on the part of all persons interested in the movement to improve the roads of the State.

We publish herewith a letter from the acting director of the Department of Agriculture. It is an answer to an inquiry concerning the Good Roads' Train which has been operating in the South during the past year, under the supervision of the Government. An effort will be made to get this train up in this neck of woods. This is the letter:

J. W. Price, M. D.,
My dear Sir—This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 20 addressed to Director of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. We desire to co-operate in every possible way with all enterprising communities who are able and willing to improve their highways. This cooperation consists in furnishing by the necessary machinery and skilled supervision, and by the local authorities the necessary materials and labor. We have built many miles of sample roads in different parts of the country under this cooperative plan, but unless our appropriation is considerably increased next year, it will be impossible for us to make any more engagements. Your application, will however, be placed on file, and if our appropriation is sufficiently increased, we shall be glad to take the matter up.

We send you under separate cover a selection of our literature which I trust you will find applicable to your situation.

Very truly yours,
M. G. ELDRIDGE,
Acting Director
U. S. Department of Agriculture,
Washington, D. C. Mar. 29

This sounds rather discouraging but it shows the proper enterprise and use concerted action we will bring them to us. We have to have better roads, as things have come to such a pass that everybody recognizes the short sightedness of our present policy. But here we have good roads we will have to learn how to make them, and the only practical way to teach the whole country is the plan adopted by the Department of Agriculture.

They send out a train equipped with every thing, except laborers, teams and material, which is furnished by the county in which they stop. The men in charge are specialists in the art of road making done in the thorough finished manner which so characterizes our government. To illustrate their methods they build several miles of road of different materials, giving practical object lessons from laying the foundation to the smoothing off of the top layer; in overcoming and taking advantage of inequalities of the earth's surface; making practical use of the material in hand, and of the appliances of modern machinery.

The United States has not yet decided to build our roads for us, but perhaps the government is pursuing the wiser course in its efforts to teach the whole people what good roads are; what it takes to begin them and how much they save and how in care of them.

The ignorance of the art of road making is simply astonishing. There is not a man in the country that knows comparatively anything about roads, the money that is yearly spent for temporary repairs on the main lines of travel, the country can afford.

That good roads mean more for the prosperity of a country than any other feature cannot be denied. The great railroad corporations are recognizing the fact that one of the surest ways of increasing the life of commerce is to have good roads. The Good Roads Train which the Southern Railway is sending over its line is an illustration of this assertion. This great railway system has increased the people along its line by the development of good roads, and every county has enormous opportunities in meeting those who would like to have more roads than half way.

Let us get together and do our utmost in the matter for it will mean dollars saved where pennies are expended. We are no longer in the hands of the contractors but we can make any more money than we can lose.

Within the past two years the road on our main line has been laid out and built in no more than two days and nights.

This is a new thing.

thern Farm Magazine:

"Early this month the Southern Railway will start from Washington a Good Roads Special train to make a trip extending over several weeks and reaching many points along its line in the South. The co-operation of the National Good Roads Association and of the Department of Agriculture has been secured and wherever the train stops experts will give practical object lessons in the building of model roads. Railroads are interested jointly with the farmers in bringing about the improvement of public highways, and this enterprise of the Southern Railway will undoubtedly give a great impetus to the growing interest in that subject in the South, where the need of better roads is felt by many communities.

The trip of the Good Roads Train through the Mississippi Valley over the tracks of the Illinois Central Railroad two or three months ago was a success in every respect. Its cars, loaded with improved road building machinery in charge of expert road builders were welcomed by large crowds of knowledge seekers at every point where a stop was made, and the demonstration in a hall a dozen States of practical methods of making roads have given an impetus to the movement for such improvement all over the South.

In some parts of the country the task of reaching town is always difficult for the farmer; in others the oncoming winter leads him to wish for better roads. The desire is likely to be strengthened by an incident reported from one of the tide water counties of Virginia. Not long ago a Northern firm contemplated buying a large tract of wood land in the county and to build saw mills to convert into cash the timber, which has never found a ready sale because of lack of such facilities. The correspondence came to a sudden end when the proposed buyers discovered that the roads leading from forest to river landings were of such poor character that the cost of hauling the timber would almost amount to what the timber was worth. In that particular case the buyers have been awakened to the necessity of a better system of working the roads. Such an awakening is likely to follow every instance of checking investment in a neighborhood because of bad roads. The growing determination to overcome such difficulties in various parts of the South should be strengthened by the Good Roads Special of the Southern Railway."

A Great Man.

As the mists of partisan misapprehension slowly roll away from the newly made grave of Cecil Rhodes, his memory shines out with uncommon lustre. It appears from his biographies that his fabulous fortune in gold and diamonds is almost entirely devoted to the cause of humanity's upliftment. The aims of his life seem to have been of the noblest character but he erred in the choice of means to materialize them. Heretofore his last will and testament provides for colonial scholarships too numerous to mention. Two American scholarships each of the United States and Territories of the United States, and five scholarships for German students at Oxford, England, the latter are to be nominated by the German Emperor. The motive Mr Rhodes gives for this is to therefore that "a good understanding between England, Germany and the United States will secure the peace of the world, and education is the surest way to the strongest tie. Thus it will seem that his benefactions reach beyond the limits of that great British Empire on which he never sets, and embrace both the United States and the German Empire. By this means the United States will have a hundred students permanently at Oxford, and Germany five students to say nothing of the numbers of British colonial students gathered there to be educated by the higher educational advantages now attainable anywhere on the planet. So after all Cecil Rhodes will in the future be known as a generous citizen of the "United States of the English Speaking World" which he dreamed and for which he lived.

Push back the hair from his curls
The little hands unfold,
Then gently smooth the locks again,
And clasp the palms so cold!

'Tis strange the stillness that has come
Where once 'twas only glee:
We had not joined the thought of death,
Sweet little babe, with thee!

Beyond our sight the holy dew,
Mid scenes all bright and fair,
'Tis heaven a world of peace and love—
The small and great are there.

Divided for a little while,
Death claims this infant form,
Whose spirit lies for ever safe
From every earthly storm.

Then little Clarence sweetly sleep
Upon the Savior's breast;
We mourn, but humbly bear our cross,
Because God knoweth best.

MRS. ETTA BEARD
Huntersville, W. Va.

B. F. McElwee comes out this week with his announcement for the office of County Commissioner. This makes three candidates in the field and others talked of. Only Edray and McElwee are eligible and both districts have men in the field.

J. R. Warwick is out for reelection and promises to pursue the same conservative policy that has characterized him during the six years he has held office.

G. H. McLaughlin is on the still hunt for this office. Edray district has a right to put candidates in the field and Grandpa has taken advantage of it. He is an old Confederate soldier, and is too widely known to need an introduction.

The last one to enter the race is B. F. McElwee, of Dunmore, a representative citizen of Upper Pocahontas, and who has been thought of as an eligible man for the office for years. He is secretary and manager of the Pocahontas Telephone Company, and is a busy man.

Dr. W. J. Jarrett the Dentist will be at Clover Lick, April 2, 4 days
Academy, April 21, 4 days
Cass, April 25, for 4 days
All work guaranteed; painless extraction of teeth.
